

Unlikely Survivors @ Animal Nepal

Animal rescue can be a challenging job. Convincing the owner of that a sick animal needs to be taken to our shelter often takes lots of time. Catching can be dangerous, and emergency treatment frustrating.

At our dog and donkey sanctuaries we see many 'hopeless' cases.

Rescued donkeys often are so weak, they are unable to walk or eat.

Rescued dogs are generally severely malnourished and dehydrated, and suffer from terrible skin conditions.

At times the spirit of the animal seems broken. It seems help came too late.

But Nepal's dogs and donkeys are remarkably resilient and forgiving.

Our ‘hopeless’ cases generally become much beloved residents or pets. Clover and Lulu (see page 1), Asha, Maneka, Sanu, Lalu and Belle (above) all did.

In honour of the wonderful spirit of Nepal’s animals,
